

James Morley

James Morley

James Morley started playing the drums in high school bands before taking up the bass (at an audition for a drummer no less) in the late eighties. He joined The Rookies who went on to become one of Western Australia's biggest pub bands at the time, drawing over a thousand people, 3 nights a week for 3 years. After their demise, he formed Strawberry Blonde who took over from where The Rookies left off.

As the band were about to embark on a recording project, James caught wind of an opening as bass player for rock legends The Angels. Within a couple of weeks, he had successfully got the job and was sitting at Ardent studios in Memphis, recording Beyond Salvation, which went on to sell at double platinum status and became the first number one album for The Angels in Australia. This was followed by MTV live videos, concert tours and overseas trips. One of the first concerts he performed with the band was in front of 42,000 people alongside his favourite artists such as Midnight Oil, Crowded House and Jimmy Barnes to name a few.

Five years and a couple of more albums later, James left the band to record his own album (see soundbytes here) at the famed Compass Point Studios in the Bahamas. This studio is the second most successful (in record sales) in the world spawning AC/DC's Back in Black to name one of many world best sellers. At the helm of his Freewheelin album was Terry Manning who was responsible for producing ZZ Top and Led Zepelin amongst others. James played all the instruments (bass, drums, guitar and vocals) himself.

After spending some time performing these tracks live, James had been speaking to AC/DC drummer Simon Wright (one of the true gentlemen in rock) and was asked to go to the U.S.A. to play some guitar tracks with Simon on an AC/DC tribute album Thunderbolt James stayed with Simon and his Family in L.A. for some three months whilst recording tracks alongside Sebastian Bach (Skid Row), Phil Collen (Def Leopard), Scott Ian (Anthrax), Lemmy (Motorhead), Whitfield Crane (Ugly kid Joe), Bob Kulik (Meatloaf), Warren DeMartini (Ratt), Dee Snider (Twisted Sister), Joe Lynn Turner (Rainbow,Deep Purple) and many more.
